Baltimore, Sept. 10, 1845.

DENTAL SURGERY,
DODGE AND PARMELE,
DYOR, having practised the three past winters in this city, respectfully announce to their friends and the public that they have concluded to keep their Washington office open during the entire year in future, at their present location on Pennsylvania avenue, near Tenth street, where one or both of the partners may always be found in attendance. They respectfully tender their professional services to their friends and the public, and invite all who may require the advice and skill of the experienced and particulal dentiat to call on them, learn their terms, and examine their claims to public confidence and patronage. They would particularly call attention to their patent method of fastening artificial teeth when set on gold plats which is used by them alone in the city of Washington. The most prominent advantages are the following:

1st. It saves the pain attendant upon the removal of the roots of the front teeth when in a healthy condition, and makes those roots highly useful in fastening the artificial teeth.

2d. It gives the teeth greater firmness, rendering them always much less troublecome and more useful in the process of mastication than the common mode.

3d. It renders it easy to remove and replace the ful in the process of mastication than the common mode.

3d. It renders it easy to remove and replace the teeth, which, together with the peculiar simplicity of the fastenings, enable the wearer to keep them always clean.

The great improvement secured by this patent needs but to be seen in order to be understood and used to be appreciated. It is universally commended by those who have availed themselves of its advantages.

discovering a flaw in our title, than in its invulnerable perfection. Suppose this morning, on striving at his office, Col. Webb had found me installed in his editorial chair, with one hand using a good democratic pen for the benefit of the Courier's readers, and with the other brandishing a bowie knife; while I should stoutly assert a claim to occupy one half or more of the Courier's editorial columns with the people of my own brain: what would the gallant colonel de? Would the fear of a fight prevent him from asserting his rights? Would he allow me to go on day after day in the joint occupancy? For peace, would he give me one-half of his paper? And while his friends talked of the colonel's right, would he insist upon negotiation, arbitration, masterly inactivity, and peace at all hazards? Would he give me no "notice" to quit? In short, what is sue would our mititury friend take? If he believed his right and title clear and unquestionable to occupy the Courier's area of freedom as he pleased, would the dread of consequences deter him from kicking me out of his office?

I protest, in behalf of the people whose rights are at stake, against changing the question at issue. British cannon constitute no element in the investigation of our title to Oregon. And if the process of investigation establish the validity of our title to this farm, hen, in legislating for this farm, and ploughing and fencing it as we please, British connon still constitute no element until we meet with them. The questions at issue are questions of title, and of ploughing and fencing; and these we are to decide on prisciples of right and justice, no matter whether the opposite claimant be strong or weak, wise or foolish, ample or crafty. I have no patience with this sternal din of British power, and British courage. What have they to do with our exercise of a lawful American rights, and our discharge of imperative American duties? Be British courage what it may, it is unequal to facing the open front of honest truth. Be British power what it manly, yet dispassionate tone, its chaste yet uppretending style. The definition of a revenue tariff is so clear and forcible, as to extort commendation from the bitterest opponents of the President. Happening a few evenings since to be at a social gathering of some dozen of gentlemen, most of them leading whigs, the message became the topic of remark, and I was agrecably surprised to hear every one speak of it in terms of culogy, and especially of that part devoted to the tariff. All of them expressed entire satisfaction, and hoped the views of the President might be carried out, and become the settled policy of the country. The truth is, that the tariff has been more discussed and less understood than any subject which has arrested the attention of American statesmen. The lariffites or prefectionists have always endeavored to mysaify the subject.

"Thope no one with you doubts the fidelity of Mississippi on the Oregon question. Say to them, if such there be, that on that question Mississippi endorses faily and freely all that Mr. Polk has said and done. The demands on Grest Britain—as set forth in her minister's despatch to Mr. Buchannen—will never be authorited to with the consent of this State. We have counted the cost, and know how much we are to suffer in the event of war. We sak for an honorable peace. We will have it on no other terms. This State would suffer her cotton-fields to grow up in thore, and sand her hardy sone to erimnon the waters of the Columbis with their blood, sooner than permit Great Britain to remove a spoomful of sand from our shores, if she undertook to do it by force or by might. All that she can get by diplomecy she is welcome to; and all that she can take by force she will take it drenched in British blood.

"Walker's report has filled his friends with rejoicing. It is indisputably one of the most statesmanike and masterly productions that has ever emmanded from that department. I need scarcely say that his friends hoped for, and his enemies feared, such a production."

LATER FROM JAMAICA.

LATER FROM JAMAICA.

By the arrival of the brig Milton, Capt. Murphy, we have files of Kingston papers to the 9th ult., from which we glean the following:

"The railway between this and Spanish Town has been running since its opening with the greatest success and safety, taking on several occasions upwards of 1,000 passengers per day, and yie ding proportionately large returns.

"That this island has been for some years past in an embarrassed and distressed condition, as compared with previous years of prosperity, is undeniable. The causes of the depression are sufficiently well known; but even were they not, it is not our present purpose to inquire into them, as we think they are disappearing, and that the country is receding from prostration towards a point of prosperity more culminating than at any previous period. The evidences of this are abundant. We speak not of freedom, for that is the cause; but the effects are apparent in the existence and prosperity of banking establishments and of railways, in the projection of many public enterprises, in the superior morality and enlightenment of all classes, and in a variety of minor points—the surest, but perhaps the less striking of which, are the many building improvements already completed and now in progress in the most important part of our city.

The battle will doubtless be severe and furious, and when it is over, the number of killed and wounded, on both sides, will be severe. To-day there was a moderate business done at a decline, on the average, of one per cent.

The flour market was, in the beginning of last week, in difficulty; but it made a forward movement in the middle, and flour reached six dollars per barrel. But the advance could not be maintained; and on Staturday it had to retreat to its former position of $5.75, where it remains to-day.

The flour market was, in the beginning of last week, in difficulty; but it made a forward movement in the middle, and flour reached six dollars per barrel. But the advance could not be maintained; and on Staturday it had to retreat to its former position of $5.75, where it remains to-day.

AWFUL TRAGEDY IN ALABAMA.—One of the mos horrible tragedies ever cancied in real life, occurred in Dellas county, Alabama, on the 29th ultimo, of which the Alabama Independent gives the following account. We well recollect the bank robbery which was the prelude to all these dreadful crimes. It occurred but a few years ago.

Our readers will remember Thomas C. McKcan, of bank-robbing memory. Previous to his outbreak-ing descriptions.

was the prelude to all these dreadful crimes. It occurred but a few years ago.

Our readers will remember Thomas C. McKean, of bank-robbing memory. Previous to his outbreaking depredations, Mr. McK. occupied a fair standing in community, being of a highly respectable family, and a man of insmuating address. He succeeded in winning the affections of a young and articless school girl, in Marion, Perry county, and, in opposition to the wishea and advice of her friends, ran off with and married her. This young and unsuspecting girl was the daughter of Mr. J. K. C. Poole, of Perry county. And amid all the hard-hips to which her connexion with such a man as McKean subjected her, she remained firmly attached to him, and could not be prevailed upon to leave him, until the commission of the Columbus Bank robbery. from which time she has never seen him. Being intelligent and remarkably beautiful, and her friends having determined to procure her a divorce from her unfortunate marriage, she soon became an object of considerable attraction, and many have been the suitors for her hand. Among these was the unfortunate Bethel Holmes, a gentleman highly respected and eateemed in Dallas county, where he resided. On the evening of Saturday the 29th November, at the house of Col. Wm. H. Richardson, who had married the sister of Mrs. McKean, and where this unhappy lady was spending a portion of her time. Holmes perpetrated the horrid deed.

It seems that Holmes and Mrs. McKean were left alone in the parlor, and it is presumed that, receiving a final rejection of his suit, he was reized with an unaccountable phrensy, and abot Mrs. McKean with a pistol, the ball entering her heart, and then insmediately shot himself.

Col. Richardson had been out of the room but a short time when the report of the pistol induced him to return. He found the unfortunate lady already exist an unaccountable phrensy, and shot Mrs. McKean with a pistol, the ball entering her heart, and the nimmediately shot himself.

Col. Richardson had been out of the roo an anfortunates were greatly beloved.

The Mobile Herald of the 9th, gives an extract of a letter, in which are full and more correct particulars:

"It seems from what we learn from other sources, that Holmes meditated this double murder for weeks. The letter says: "After dinner on Saturday Holmes ordered his horse. After it was brought out, he told the servant girl to go up and tell Mrs. McKean that he wished to speak with her in the parlor. She came down, and he closed the door. The girl remained outside and listened at the doer. She heard him ask her if she was willing to promise to marry him. She answered she had already requested him never again to mention the subject to her, for she would never marry him. Immediately after she heard her exclaim, "Lord have mercy on my soul," and at the same moment a report of a pistol; then another and another, and a fall. She then opened the door, and saw him fall on the floor. The pistol had fallen out of his hand, and he was feeling to find it to fire again; she screamed to the boy who was holding the horse at the door, that Mr. Holmes had shot himself. She ran in and brought out the pistol, fearing that he would get hold of it. Unfortunately Mr. R. had gone to the gin-house, and Mrs. R. had also gone out in the yard somewhere. Two or three gentlemen happened to be riding by on horseback. They dismounted, and came into the house at the same moment that Mr. and Mrs. R. got there, and all went in together. At first they did not see Mrs. McKean—she was sitting up in a rocking-chair; she was shot right through the temple, (instead of the heart,) and from her position he must have held her with one hand and shot her with the other. He then, it is supposed, aimed at his own temple, but pointed too high; for the ball glanced from the upper part of his head, and lodged in the ceiling above. He then fired again, but too low for the temple; the ball entered below the cheek bone, tearing his face all to pieces. They neither of them spoke. Mrs. McKean lived an hour and a hallife h

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

This document so eagerly looked for has doubtless been perused with care and attention by the most of our readers. We gave it in full in our last paper, and were consequently debarred the privilege of making any comments for the want of room, on account of its greaf length. Indeed it needs no comment at our hands; "It has but to be read to be admired." There is no mystery to be cleared away by explanation—no change of views to be vindicated.
The same republican doctrine that Mr. Polk has proclaimed from almost every stump in Tennessee, he sill, as we confidently expected, firmly adheres to.
As ever, he is strongly in favor of reducing the tariff to the revenue standard—of reviving the independent treasury—of annexing Texas at the earliest possible period, and extending the stars and stripes over the whole of Oregon. Clear, forcible, and purely democratic, the message accords with the views and feelings of a majority of the American people. It is just such a document as we looked for—such an one, as we wanted to see. Will whigery have the effrontery to accuse Mr. Polk of changing? Or has it the magnanimity to admit the utter falsity of the various predictions made in reference to the message?

We published an article on Friday last from the Boston Courier, which stated, and gave the proofs, that Capt. Jonathan Winship. of Brighton (Mass.) projected and commenced the first attempt, by any civilized person, to establish a trading establishment on the Columbia river, &c. The Boston Transcript copies the article entire, and says:

"We always had a presentiment that the noble-hearted and gallant captain was to be suitably hon-ored one of these days, and this very probable event confirms it. Let the first city on the Columbia—the-seat of the greatest state government in the territo-ry—be named Wieship, when it will be sure to prosper like a green bay tree, or like the young plants in the nursery at Brighton."

We recollect a conversation between Capt. W., soon after his return, and the late Commodore Porter, on the subject of Oregon, in which the former advised the sending a strong naval force to that region to protect American interests there. The commodore fully acquiesced in the suggestion, deeming it of great importance; and he said he would lay the matter before the Navy Department. We have no doubt Capt. W. could give valuable information in regard to that country, which at this time would be of much use to the government.—Balt. American.

MACKETIC TELEGRAPH.—The line of magnetic telegraph between New York and Philadelphia will be completed for practical operations in a few days. The erection of the posts on the line between Baltimore and Philadelphia is going forward energetically. In about thirty days, or probably less, the whole line from Washington, through Baltimore and Philadelphia, to New York, will be in full operation.—Balt. Rep.
